

VRINGO ANNOUNCES UPDATE ON LITIGATION AGAINST ZTE IN THE UNITED STATES AND UNITED KINGDOM

February 17, 2015

NEW YORK - February 17, 2015 - Vringo, Inc. (NASDAQ: VRNG), a company engaged in the innovation, development and monetization of intellectual property, today announced several developments in its global litigation against ZTE.

In the United States, ZTE's case against Vringo, which it improperly brought in Delaware, has been transferred to the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, where it will be heard along with Vringo's existing claim against ZTE for breach of a non-disclosure agreement between the parties.

"Vringo has answered ZTE's complaint and looks forward to further addressing ZTE's allegations regarding Vringo and ZTE's FRAND obligations. Numerous courts around the world have agreed that Vringo's approach is in accord with FRAND principles and that it is ZTE, not Vringo, whose behavior is outside of patent licensing norms," said David Cohen Vringo's Chief Legal and Intellectual Property Officer.

In the United Kingdom, Vringo looks forward to the remedy phase of its lawsuit against ZTE for infringement of the UK part of European Patent 1,212,919 (the "'919 Patent"), which the UK High Court found valid as amended and infringed by ZTE on November 28, 2014. The Court has ordered the parties to submit pleadings on remedies, and has scheduled a hearing for May 22, 2015, in which it will set the structure for the remainder of the case.

Because ZTE has represented that it only intends to sell equipment in the United Kingdom that is not fully compliant with ETSI standards and, according to ZTE, ZTE therefore will not infringe the claims-in-suit in the UK in the future; in order to streamline costs and process; and to expedite the further phases of its litigation in the United Kingdom, Vringo has withdrawn its infringement claims against ZTE on the UK parts of European Patents 1,808,029 (the "'029 Patent"), 1,221,212 (the "'212 Patent"), and 1,186,119 (the "'119 Patent"). Vringo's claim against ZTE for infringement of the UK part of European Patent 1,330,933 remains pending, and is currently scheduled to be heard by the Court in a trial starting on June 8, 2015.

In other jurisdictions where ZTE sells products or otherwise infringes these patents, Vringo continues to maintain its patent infringement lawsuits against ZTE. The '119 Patent has been held valid and infringed by ZTE in Germany, prima facie, valid and infringed by ZTE in the Netherlands, and also remains in suit in France, where it is scheduled to be heard by the court on April 13, 2015. The '212 Patent remains in suit in France, where it is scheduled to be heard by the French court on April 13, 2015, and in Australia. The '029 Patent remains in suit in Romania, where the court has granted a preliminary injunction against ZTE, and in Malaysia, where it is currently scheduled to be heard by the court on October 26, 2015.
